Mrs. Mary Gordon Found Dead on Road Side.

Starting from his home on the Greenwich pike to meet the interurban car which leaves Lexington for Paris at 7 o'clock a. m. Sunday to meet his aunt, Mrs. Mary Gordon, who had been to Lexington, Saturday, Gregg Hipshire, of near Hutchison, discovered lying upon the side of the road the prostrate form of a woman whose clothing resembled that which his aunt had worn when she departed from home the day previous.

Alighting from his buggy and going to the woman, Mr. Hipshire was horrified to find the woman was his aunt, who was dead and frozen stiff. Returning hurriedly home he notified his father, William Hipshire, with whom Mrs. Gordon resided, and together with the aid of some neighbors they returned to the place in the road where the body lay, and removed the corpse to the residence, where an inquest was held by Coroner Dr. William Kenney.

The jury, composed of James H. Thompson, foreman, and five others, rendered the following verdict: "We, the jury, find the body before us to be that of Mary Gordon and that she came to her death by exposure."

Mrs. Gordon was aged fifty-one years and went to Lexington Saturday in response to a notice from her attorney to arrange a compromise with the Bluegrass Traction Company, Mrs. Gordon having some time ago met with an accident in which she suffered a fracture of the collar bone, and had a claim against the said company for damages. She was to have returned on the 4 o'clock car Saturday afternoon and her nephew went to meet her, but when she failed to arrive the family concluded that business had detained her and that she had remained with relatives in Lexington and would return Sunday morning and gave the matter but little thought.

Mrs. Gordon, however, came on the 5 o'clock car, which she left at the intersection of the Greenwich pike. When Mrs. Gordon found there was no one to meet her she started afoot in the direction of her home, which was nearly one and one-half miles distant down the road.

Mrs. Gordon was carrying a number of bundles, having made some purchases of holiday goods while in Lexington, and when almost half way home she was passed by J. L. Sweeney, a neighbor. It is thought that Mrs. Gordon becoming tired sat down to rest and becoming chilled was unable to proceed any further, and no one coming along who could have rendered her assistance, she perished from the cold when almost in sight of home.

She is survived by one son, Clifton Gordon, who resides in Cincinnati. Mr. Gordon was notified by telegram of his mother's tragic death and arrived on the 10:30 train Sunday night. The funeral occurred yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock, services being conducted by Elder H. Bristow, of Lexington, and burial at the Old Union burying ground.

Bourbon Medical Society.

The regular monthly meeting of the Bourbon County Medical Society was held at the office rooms of Dr. W. C. Ussery, over the Bourbon Bank, on last Thursday evening.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Dr. Frank Fithian; Vice President, Dr. Wm. Miller, of Millersburg; Secretary and Treasurer, Dr. C. G. Daugherty; Censor, Dr. J. Stuart Wallingford.

Dr. F. L. Lapsley was elected delegate to the meeting of the State Humane Society, in Louisville, next October.

After the very interesting program the doctors were given a sumptuous luncheon by their host, Dr. W. C. Ussery, during which the Elks band appeared and gave their leader, Dr. Ussery, a surprise serenade.

It was a most enjoyable occasion for the medicine men.

The next meeting of the society will be held with Drs. Fithian and Daugherty on the evening of January 3, 1907, when the program for 1907 will be decided upon. The society is contemplating the establishment of a post-graduate course, and are formulating plans for rendering material assistance to the Hospital Circle, who have in hand the raising of funds for the erection of a city hospital.

TO THE PUBLIC.

During this happy season of "Peace on Earth, Good Will to Men," I am mindful of the fact that the people of Bourbon and the adjoining counties have been exceedingly liberal in their patronage in the past. I extend to all a wish for a Merry Christmas and Happy and Prosperous New Year.

The Jew of Gallilee.

(From the Lexington Herald of December 25, 1094.)

Some weeks ago many thousands celebrated the anniversary of the birth of Martin Luther. On January 19 other thousands will celebrate the birthday of Robert E. Lee, and on the 22nd of February this great Republic will commemorate the birth of George Washington. In every nation, among every people, these natal days of their immortals are thus celebrated with appropriate ceremonies and many demonstrations of admiration and gratitude. To-day all Christendom celebrates the anniversary of the birth of the Jew, Jesus of Nazareth, and with various ceremonies and in numerous modes will commemorate and honor this notable day.

The Herald is purely a secular paper, and as such this morning it holds up for contemplation the man Jesus—leaving to preachers and ecclesiastics the demonstration of His God-head—the exemplification of His divine nature and the mysterious union of the two natures in one person.

Our ordinary conception of this Jew of Nazareth is of a meek and lowly man a man of feminine kindness and infinite tenderness and boundless forbearance; a man capable of any sacrifice for peace and charity. In a certain narrow sense there may be said to be much of truth in this conception; but it is far from being the whole truth of the major part of the truth.

He was the perfect man; in Him, manhood was complete and perfect. He possessed in absolute perfection every good human quality—he exhibited every possible worthy human attribute. Whatever high quality any man ever exhibited this man possessed that quality and exhibited it in complete perfection.

Courage is the ordinary basic quality of every lofty soul—of every great man. Jesus was the very bravest man that ever lived—bravest in every sense and meaning of that word and of the conception the word embodies. There was no foe He did not face; no enemy He did not confront; no danger He did not meet, and that with calm, resolute and dauntless self-control. He denounced the leaders of the people in solemn and terrific manner. He presented Himself openly in the temple, and before Pilate maintained the composure of complete courage.

His life is the manliest in history in every shade of the glorious conception. We are fearfully and wonderfully made. Our own Declaration of Independence declares as the fundamental truth of our statesmanship and of our Government that we are "created," and if "created," then we must of necessity be created by God, who thereby becomes the common Father. If this be true, then in every man is the likeness of the Divine Creator and in some real, though mysterious, mode we are the sons of God—even as the Grecian poet declared centuries ago. This Jew showed His divine sonship—using this phrase as did the Grecian poet—in the manly conduct of His life during the whole of His career. He was leader, chief, friend, brother; He refused companionship with crime and wrong, but forgave when tears showed sorrow. He awed the mighty; He lifted up the broken-hearted; He defied the strong; He gave peace and comfort to the tempest-tossed and tempted.

Men have spoken with marvelous eloquence and their wonderful sentences have been fruitful; the orators of the ages, Demosthenes, Patrick Henry, Mirabeau—have been epoch-making men; but this unlettered Jew spake as man never spake before, and His utterances are to-day the ever-increasing power for civilization and growth. Wherever men accept His utterances there liberty abides and purity governs.

Perhaps the crowning, loftiest quality of this superb nature of ours is the power to love—to love profoundly, to love supremely; to love our race, love truth, love our country, to love in the pure and sweet companionship of congenial and united natures.

This Jew was the very incarnation of love. [Lofty souls have laid down their lives for others; martyrs and confessors, husbands and fathers, patriots and soldiers have shown how very little lower than angels is this race of ours. This Jew so gave His life that He declared no man took it—He gave it the free-will gift of his loving heart for those who were His enemies—not for country, not for some passionately beloved one, not for His religion, but solely for those whose hands became bloody by crucifying Him.

He was tender as He was brave—His tenderness was as complete as His courage. He took little children in His arms, He drove the angry crowd from the poor woman with the sublime sentence pregnant with tenderness and yet full of judgment: "Let him who is not guilty cast the first stone." He wept at the tomb of Lazarus, and in the very agony of His death-throes. He said to the friend He loved the most that His mother was thereafter to be the mother of His friend.

For thirty years this Jew worked in a carpenter shop in Nazareth—the silent hours working in Him for the stupendous career to which He was to be called. Faithful, industrious, honest, hard-working mechanic, slowly revolving the mighty utterances which were to revolutionize the world—slowly qualifying Himself for the tremendous task awaiting Him. And then only a short three years and then the ignominious death of the cross; and then nineteen centuries, during which His acts and His words and His life have been the ever-increasing forces by means of which the world has been civilized, man becomes free and the future made certain.

To-day millions will worship Him as God; the churches dedicated to Him will be filled with those who love and adore Him. Wherever there is an orphan, asylum or a charity, it will be because of Him. Wherever woman is respected and revered and is influential there He will be worshiped. And Him worship will be and ought to be a joyous worship. He has made the world better—He has made it worth living in and working in.

The Herald desires simply to present an inadequate view of the Man of Gallilee—to recall the supreme fact that He was very man; that in His manhood He was touched with the sense of our infirmities and was tempted at all points, ever as the most sinful of the race is tempted; that this is His human natal day we celebrate; His entrance as a babe into this world—a babe born in a manger, but of royal blood and royal parentage—the Heir of inconceivable glories as the Son of David. Let us not forget this human truth; nor slur it over. To one who has tried to study this human character; to know something of the true inner life and qualities of this Mechanic of Nazareth, this Teacher, Hero, Martyr and Lover—it is an absorbing study of increasing interest. If it were possible we would this day hold up this man Jesus of Nazareth as the model after whom all men might well mould themselves and their lives.

He has brought joy and gladness into whatever country His rule is recognized—so we best commemorate His life and His character by adding joy and gladness to all with whom we come in contact. Each in his place and according to his ability can do this—so that when the short day ends in the gloom of a winter night, each may say to himself: "To-day I made some sad heart glad, some poor brother better and added to the sum of human happiness and human gladness."

"For Sale Cheap"

By C. H. SUTCLIFFE

Copyright, 1906, by C. H. Sutcliffe

"Why don't you fellows," wrote Burt Henderson to young Weaver and Knowlton of Columbia college, "hire an auto some Saturday and come down here to see me? The old folks will make you welcome, and my sister Annette, of whom you have heard me speak, is home now. Arrange to stay over Sunday with us. We'll have a bully time."

Young Henderson was still living with his parents at their country house on Long Island and had been chummy with the two men during his days in college. The invitation was alluring. Each of the sophs had taken lessons in running an auto, the Long Island roads were known to be good, and at the end of the run was a handsome girl, as they knew by a photograph they had seen.

It was a rare chance to get out of town and do a lot of other things besides, and on a certain Saturday morning of a certain June an auto might have been seen speeding two rather hilarious young men up the island roads. The garage man had been particular when they went to hire the machine. They confessed to being timid about speed, but felt perfectly confident on all other points, and after displaying their knowledge in a practical way he had placed them in charge.

The destination was thirty miles from Brooklyn, but at a steady jog this might have been covered by noon had not something happened to prevent.

As they were passing through Jamaica, the journey only just begun, a handsome young lady emerged from a house, stepped into a steam runabout and, acting as her own chauffeur, started off at a fast clip.

"By George, but did you ever see anything to compare with her?" gasped young Weaver, who was noted as impressionable.

"Handsomest girl I ever saw," was the reply.

"Did you notice that look she threw at me?"

"It was meant for me."

"You go on! Say, I'd give all I expect to get from my grandmother's estate to know that girl. What eyes! What hair! As her eyes looked into mine for an instant!"

"She was looking into mine, and there was a roguish, defiant look in them as if she dared us to follow her."

"By George, but come to think of it, we ought to follow her anyhow. No woman has any business driving a machine. Suppose a tire comes off or anything breaks. She may meet a train at a crossing, run into a ditch or have something else happen. If we are on hand we can assist."

More speed was put on to decrease the distance and the young lady looked back as she heard the chugging of the big machine.

"She's surely flirting with me!" gurgled young Weaver as he clasped his hands.

"You don't!" replied young Knowlton. "She doesn't know that you are on earth. Isn't she skimming along pretty fast?"

"Seems to me she's let out a link. This is faster than we ever drove before, but we've got to take chances or lose that girl."

The girl in the runabout had several ideas on the subject in hand. One was that the two young men behind her were new to the sport. Another was that they had left the direct road in order to follow her. The third was that she would be revenged on them. She rattled along at a high speed for a mile and could see without turning her head too much that the big machine was wabbling badly and being driven by a trembling hand. On coming to where the highway separated to unite a quarter of a mile farther on, she chose the roughest way. The light-weight runabout seemed to sail over the humps and ruts and washouts, while the larger machine had to slow down and bump its way along.

"If we lose her I'll commit suicide," said young Weaver as he hung on for dear life and grew paler every minute.

"Don't you fear that I will lose her," grimly replied Knowlton. "This is rather bumpy, but I'll stand ten miles of it for another look from those blue eyes."

"Her black eyes, you mean?"

"I mean blue. If I ever take you out into the country again may I be hanged!"

"Ditto. Because a handsome girl takes it into her head to flirt with me a bit!"

But the rest was lost in the bumping. The girl could have dropped them on that bit of road, but she made no effort. When they deluged into the main road she was in sight and joggling along at an easy pace. She had led them seven or eight miles out of their road before they realized it. Each was wishing the other would throw out a hint about abandoning the chase when the runabout turned into a highway that was not macadamized. It was heavy with sand, and the auto groaned and complained as it made the steep hills.

"If she wasn't the best looking girl I ever saw," began Knowlton.

"If she hadn't dared us to follow her," replied Weaver.

Then there was a scream ahead of them, and a tire was seen to leave one of the wheels of the runabout and the machine to come to a standstill.

"Ye gods, but what luck for me!" whispered Weaver.

"Say, now, if you don't let me do all the talking I'll break your neck!" replied Knowlton.

When the auto came up, the girl was down on her feet inspecting damages. It was easy to see that the machine must be got home by some motive power beyond its own. There were too many stony spots on the highway to run it on the rim of the damaged wheel. Mr. Knowlton at once introduced himself and companion and tendered their services.

They found the young lady even better looking than they had given her credit for. She was not at all embarrassed over the meeting. She was chatty and vivacious, and in five minutes' talk she made them realize that she knew twice as much about an auto as they did. One thing the boys forgot until afterward. They gave their names to her, but she did not reciprocate. It was decided that the damaged machine must be drawn to the side of the road and sent for later on, while the auto was to convey the girl to her home, a distance of fourteen or fifteen miles. Why she had gone out of her way she didn't explain, and the boys didn't ask.

"As I am used to autos I shall ask the privilege of acting as chauffeur," announced the young lady as she was ready to get in.

This seemed like a reflection on the abilities of the young men, and they were hesitating over it when Miss Blank took the matter in hand. There was room for one of them beside her, and both jumped for the place at once.

There was a struggle, but shame soon came to both and they humbly climbed into the rear seat and glared at each other and mentally threatened murder at the first opportunity. They soon discovered that the young lady was no vain boaster. She turned the machine about with a whizz and started off at a speed that had not continued for five minutes when young Knowlton felt compelled to lean forward and say:

"This is certainly exhilarating, but do you think it altogether safe?"

"This isn't twenty miles an hour," was the reply as the machine sailed around a curve on three wheels.

Three minutes later Mr. Weaver, whose face was growing as white as chalk and his teeth clicking together, managed to make the young lady understand that he was troubled with palpitation of the heart at times.

"Most remedy for it in the world," she replied as the machine struck a road as level and hard as a floor, and she increased the speed.

The young men instinctively clasped hands and said farewell to each other. They didn't dare reach over and twist the wheel out of the driver's hands, and yet they realized that a calamity must soon happen. A word from her might have prevented what followed, but she was intent on the road ahead.

Of a sudden, as they came upon a long strip of hazel bushes, both stood up and jumped for it and landed among the bushes with a crash.

The auto did not stop. If the girl missed them she was not concerned. They picked themselves up after a while and limped out to the road in time to make inquiries of a passing team. They walked two miles and then hired a farmer to drive them six more, always inquiring for an auto driven by a girl. At length, as they drew near a manor house embosomed in a grove, young Weaver exclaimed:

"Say, now, it's dollars to cents that this is the house we were bound for—the Henderson place!"

"And if that isn't the young lady we have been chasing may I never eat again!" replied Knowlton as he nodded at a girl on the veranda.

In front of the house was an auto tied to the fence with a rope. It was their auto. Hung in a conspicuous place was a sign reading, "For Sale Cheap." The young men did not stop to ask any questions. If their friend Burt was home they did not want to see him. If his sister Annette was home they did not want to see her. All they wanted was to get back to New York by the shortest route.

Vulgarity and the Sexes.

Vulgarity is certainly commoner among men than among women, and, indeed, when a woman is vulgar she is apt to display the quality in rare perfection. The reason why it is rare among women is that the emotional nature is stronger among women than among men, and thus where men are ambitious, fond of displaying power, anxious to carry out designs, desirous of recognition, women are sympathetic, tender, affectionate, subtle; they value relations with others more than performance, they encourage and console, because they are interested in the person who desires sympathy more than in the aims which he nourishes. If one's main interest in life is in the personalities that surround one, one is not likely to be tempted by vulgarity, because the essence, again, of vulgarity is that it tends to affix an altogether fictitious value to material things. A man who pursues wealth, comfort, power, position, is always in danger of vulgarity.—A. C. Benson in Atlantic.

Peril of Erring Soldiers.

"Strange as it may seem," said a former colonel of a Manhattan regiment, "members of state military organizations will continue to violate duty calls while knowing full well that by so doing in certain instances they render themselves marked men for life. The fact is probably not generally known among citizens that a dishonorably discharged militiaman is forever barred from holding public office, whether this applies to the municipality, the commonwealth or the federal government. I know of some cases where men with dishonorable discharges have fallen to speedy ruin upon full realization of the serious consequences attaching to conduct unbecoming a soldier."—New York Press.

REXALL

G. S. VARDEN & SON.

REMEDIES

HAVE ARRIVED IN TOWN.

No doubt you have heard of them. They are used by several millions of people throughout the United States, and we sell them to you with a guarantee that if they are not what we claim we will gladly refund your money. One remedy for each human ill.

Some three years ago a number of prominent retail druggists—realizing that a big change was to be made in the proprietary medicine business, that the public demanded to know what the ingredients were of the preparations they were advertising, and that a general reform was about to take place in proprietary medicine manufacturing and advertising, formed a co-operative company to meet the public's demand. This company was called The United Drug Co., of which the undersigned has become one of the two thousand members.

Our object was, first, to manufacture a line of prescriptions such as we had tried out in our stores and found to give the very best of results, and second, by owning our own co-operative manufacturing company we would be able to know the exact formula of every preparation we were selling, thus enabling us to give to the public the very best remedies we could find at actual manufacturing cost, plus a single retail profit.

This enabled The United Drug Company to escape the heavy charges for advertising and other expenses such as have to be paid by proprietary remedies. What was most important, it insured safety and satisfaction to our customers, because we druggists know just what we are selling.

A committee of experts was appointed who spent a long time in testing the merits of more than two thousand formulas and prescriptions recommended ed by the various druggists constituting the company.

From these, about two hundred were selected as being the best remedies known to medical science for the cure, each of its particular ailment.

The exclusive rights to these remedies were then transferred to The United Drug Company, which has since manufactured them in its superbly equipped laboratories in Boston under the now famous name of "The Rexall Remedies."

Note then, first of all, these facts:

1st. "Rexall" refers, not to one remedy but to about two hundred—each for some one particular purpose. Nobody knows better than The United Drug Company druggists the absurdity of the "cure-all."

2d. Each "Rexall" Remedy is a tested and proved success, selected for its conspicuous merit from many of its class. All had established reputations through their continued use by physicians before they became members of the "Rexall" family.

3rd. "Rexall" Remedies are sold at low prices because they are free from heavy manufacturing charges, jobbing profits, and the heavy expense of being advertised separately, as formerly.

The United Drug Company, which manufactures the Rexall Remedies, has already scored the greatest success ever known in the history of the drug business.

Three of the 200 "Rexall" Remedies, one for each human ill, are:

FOR CATARRH—MUCU-TONE

The chief ingredients of Mucu-Tone are Gentian, Cubeb, Cascara Sagrada, Glycerine, and Sarsaparilla.

Gentian is recognized in medicine as one of the greatest tonics ever discovered. It is the foundation on which Mucu-Tone is built. Gentian combines in high degree the tonic powers of all the known "bitters," with none of the disadvantages applying to them.

Cubeb has long been recognized as a specific in the treatment of all catarrhal conditions. Its action is prompt and its benefit almost invariable. In whatever part of the body the inflamed or diseased condition of the mucous membrane exists, the use of Cubeb has been recommended by the best physicians for many generations.

Cascara Sagrada is especially introduced for its necessary laxative properties.

The combination of these with Glycerine and Sarsaparilla makes Mucu-Tone a remedy that attacks catarrh from every point, gradually restores and rebuilds the diseased tissues to their former health and strength, promotes digestion and creates a normal appetite. Bottle, 50c.

"Rexall" Remedies are found only in the stores of druggists affiliated with The United Drug Company—only one in each town and each backs up this "Rexall" guarantee printed on every package: "This preparation is guaranteed to give satisfaction. If it does not, come back and get your money. It belongs to you, and we want you to have it."

FOR NERVES—

AMERICANITIS ELIXIR

The Rexall Americanitis Elixir is a tonic nerve food composed chiefly of free Phosphorus, Glycophosphates, Iron Pyrophosphate and Calisaya.

The wonderful results of this remedy are due to the fact that it supplies Phosphorus to the nerve cells in a condition in which it can be immediately and easily taken up by them. It is the only known preparation in which free Phosphorus—that is, Phosphorus which remains indefinitely unoxidized—is used.

The Glycophosphates, actual nerve-tissue builders, are one of the most recent and valuable additions to the field of this branch of medicine and unquestionably a more efficient remedy than the well-known Hypophosphates.

The Iron Pyrophosphates is the most easily assimilated form of iron which gives tone and color, and the combined alkaloids of Calisaya Bark have a tonic effect on almost all the functions of the body.

In compounding these various elements, the very highest degree of pharmaceutical skill has been employed. 75c. and $1.50 a bottle.

REXALL "93" HAIR TONIC

The famous Rexall "93" Hair Tonic is composed in chief of Resorcin, Beta Naphthol and Pilocarpin.

Resorcin is one of the latest and most effective germ-killers discovered by a science, and in connection with Beta Naphthol, which is both germicidal and antiseptic, a combination is formed which not only destroys the germs which rob the hair of its nutriment, but creates a clean and healthy condition of the scalp, which prevents the lodgment and development of new germs.

Pilocarpin is a well-known agent for restoring the hair to its natural color, where the loss of color has been due to a disease of the scalp. It is not a coloring matter or dye—it produces its effect by stimulating the scalp and hair follicles to health and active life.

This combination of curatives mixed with alcohol as a stimulant, perfects the most effective remedy for hair and scalp troubles known to-day. Bottle, 50c.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a tea spoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circular and testimonials. Address: F. J. EL TERREMOTO

By HONORE WILLISIE

Copyright, 1906, by P. C. Eastmont

For three months now Eleanor had been on the desert edge fighting for her brother's health. At first the desperation of the struggle had kept her thoughts from straying eastward; had crammed with anxiety each moment that otherwise would have been wretched with homesickness.

But now, with the leisure that came with Jack's returning health, homesickness was beginning its inroads upon her. This made doubly hard to bear the fact that Jack was developing the fractiousness of the convalescent and that an ordinary pacific disposition was becoming so irritable that it taxed even the devotion of this most devoted sister. On this particular afternoon he had expressed an inordinate desire for a certain brand of cigars.

"But, Jack dear," objected Eleanor, "the doctor says that you must not smoke."

"Who says I want to smoke?" growled Jack. "I just want to look at them and sniff of them and feel them. And I want them today."

Eleanor sighed patiently. "It's five miles to town, Jack. And though it's 4 o'clock, it's frightfully hot. Don't you want to wait until tomorrow?"

"Oh, of course, if you don't want to do the favor for me," replied the invalid, walking feebly across the tent to pick up a fan.

"Why, certainly I'm going, Jacky," she cried. "The heat won't last much longer," and she disappeared toward her own tent, leaving her brother looking a bit sheepish.

So now Eleanor was riding slowly along the blistering trail toward the sleepy little adobe village which boasted a single Yankee store, at which she thought she could get the cigars. She was a beautiful girl, slender of body and lovely of face, with the refinement of good blood through many generations showing in every lineament. Her dark blue eyes, shadowed by the heavy lashes, looked tired, and her figure drooped a little as if in utter weariness.

"It's getting pretty hard," she thought. "It's spring up there, with the snow melting into little rivulets, and the pussy willows out, and the wind flowers coming. Only the thought of Jack's getting well keeps me from going mad."

She started a little as a cheery halloo greeted her, and she saw riding down the trail toward her a broad shouldered, jolly chap in cowboy attire. He wheeled his mustang and rode beside her.

"I was taking a jaunt out to tell you that I have almost finished my work and must fly eastward again."

"Oh, that is too bad!" cried Eleanor. The man's fine brown eyes beamed. "I've only known you a week," he answered, "but it's been a mighty pleasant week."

"Jack will miss you," said the girl. The man eyed her silently. "She's wearing herself out," he thought. "I wish I could take her away from here. Burwell's nearly strong enough to go it alone now. Gads! She's a beauty!"

Eleanor wiped the alkali dust from her face and told him the reason for her trip to town.

"Rather hard on you," commented Hartley.

Eleanor smiled, but said nothing, and they rode for some distance in silence. Hartley's gaze scarcely leaving for an instant the drooping profile beside him.

"I wonder," he thought, "if she realizes that she's never told me a word of herself, who she is or—by the Lord Harry, if she'd have me I'd marry her tomorrow even if they both came from a foundling asylum."

By this time they were riding up the street of the dirty little Mexican village, whose inhabitants were too absorbed in the sight of the Americans to move from beneath the horses' feet until urged to do so by Hartley in a patois that made up in vigor what it lacked in lucidity.

The Yankee store was the only frame building for miles around. It was owned by an enterprising Vermont, who was making a small fortune in the lazy little town, where money went faster than it came.

Hartley tied the horses and they entered the store. Just as they stepped within the door it slammed shut violently behind them and the tremor of its impact shook the entire building. The storekeeper, the only other person in the dusky room, looked up in surprise that quickly changed to alarm. The tremor instead of ceasing increased.

"What's the matter?" he cried, running to the front of the store.

"I don't know," replied Hartley. "If I were up north I'd think it was a dynamite blast, but—"

Here the crockery in the window clattered and a roll of turkey red fell to the floor.

"It's an earthquake!" cried the Vermont. "Come on, get out of here quick!" and he made a dash for the knob. But the door was fast and immediately the floor was rocking so violently that the whole room seemed filled with flying articles from the store shelves.

Hartley suddenly pulled Eleanor toward him, as if trying to shield her with his body. Then a great rumble, with continuous shocks like explosions, a fearful crash and darkness!

It had all happened in so short a space of time that Eleanor had scarcely realized that she was actually encountering an earthquake. She had

Are You Tired, Nervous and Sleepless?

Nervousness and sleeplessness are usually due to the fact that the nerves are not fed on properly nourishing blood. They are starved nerves. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery makes pure rich blood, and thereby the nerves are properly nourished and all the organs of the body are run as smoothly as machinery which runs in oil. In this way you feel clean, strong and strenuous—you are toned up and invigorated, and you are good for a whole lot of physical or mental work. Best of all, the strength and increase in vitality and health are lasting.

The trouble with most tonics and medicines which have a large, booming sale for a short time, is that they are largely composed of alcohol holding the drugs in solution. This alcohol shrinks up the red blood corpuscles, and in the long run greatly injures the system. One may feel exhilarated and better for the time being, yet in the end weakened and with vitality decreased. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery contains no alcohol. Every bottle of it bears upon its wrapper The Badge of Honesty, in a full list of all its several ingredients. For the druggist to offer you something he claims is "just as good" is to insult your intelligence.

Every ingredient entering into the world-famed "Golden Medical Discovery" has the unanimous approval and endorsement of the leading medical authorities of all the several schools of practice. No other medicine sold through druggists for like purposes has any such endorsement.

The "Golden Medical Discovery" not only produces all the good effects to be obtained from the use of Golden Seal root, in all stomach, liver and bowel troubles, as in dyspepsia, biliousness, constipation, ulceration of stomach and bowels and kindred ailments, but the Golden Seal root used in its compounding is greatly enhanced in its curative action by other ingredients such as Stone root, Black Cherry bark, Bloodroot, Mandrake root and chemically pure triple-refined glycerine.

"The Common Sense Medical Adviser," is sent free in paper covers on receipt of 21 one-cent stamps to pay the cost of mailing only. For 31 stamps the cloth-bound volume will be sent. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation, biliousness and headache.

been thrown violently to the ground, as the final shock came, and now she felt out in the darkness and encountered Hartley's quiet form. Almost hysterical with fright, she called to him and clafed his hands feverishly. Then came the voice of the storekeeper:

"Hello, you two in there!"

"Yes," called Eleanor weakly. "I'm all right, but Mr. Hartley seems badly hurt."

"The whole dingy front of the store has fallen in," called the Vermont. "But I got out through a hole. Can you stay still till I get help?"

"Yes," answered Eleanor, and again she fell to clafing Hartley's hands.

It was a long and arduous task to remove the debris without injury to the prisoners beneath. The work was doubly long, owing to the fact that what few natives had not fled to the desert were hovering over their ruined adobes with walls of "El terremoto! El terremoto!" so that the storekeeper did most of the work himself.

Long before their rescue Hartley had recovered his senses and by combining their two handkerchiefs Eleanor had bound the wound in his head that seemed to be his only injury. It was twilight when they reached the street, a quiet, southern twilight, with just the edge of a great full moon coming up over the edge of the desert.

As soon as it was possible Eleanor with Hartley on guard set out for camp. She was greatly disturbed over her brother, though the natives assured her that the shock was not serious where there were no buildings.

Hartley, looking like a picturesque bandit with his bandaged forehead, was in great spirits despite his aching head. He said little until they were well out on the trail. Then he rode close up to Eleanor's pony.

"Miss Burwell," he said, "an accident like this makes us friends of about ten years' standing, doesn't it?"

"It surely does," cried Eleanor.

"Then," he went on eagerly, "don't you think that two such old friends could safely care for each other and—perhaps marry each other?"

Eleanor did not seem so much astonished as the short acquaintanceship might warrant. But she blushed deeply in the moonlight.

"But you don't know me and I don't know you," she said.

"Well, I'm an architect," he answered, "and I live in Chicago and—"

"Not the 'John Hartley, architect,' that all the world knows?" cried Eleanor.

"I'm afraid so," he replied, a little sheepishly.

Eleanor gasped. "My little name sinks into insignificance," she said.

Hartley looked at her suspiciously. "You aren't E. Burwell, the illustrator?" he exclaimed.

"I'm afraid so," she mocked.

Hartley stopped the ponies and drew her close in his arms. "Whatever the names," he whispered, "we belong to one another, anyhow."

A Bible Courtship.

A young gentleman at church conceived a most sudden and violent passion for a young lady in the next pew and felt desirous of entering into a courtship on the spot, but, the place not suiting a formal declaration, the exigency suggested the following plan: He politely handed his fair neighbor a Bible, open, with a pin stuck in the following text, second epistle of John, verse 5: "And now I beseech thee, lady, not as though I wrote a new commandment unto thee, but that which we had from the beginning, that we love one another." She returned it with the following, second chapter of Ruth, verse 10: "Then she fell on her face and bowed herself to the ground and said unto him, Why have I found grace in thine eyes, that thou shouldst take notice of me, seeing I am a stranger?" He returned the book, pointing to verse 12 of the third epistle of John, "Having many things to write unto you, I would not write with paper and ink, but I trust to come unto you and speak face to face." From the above interview the marriage took place the following week—Scottish American.

Pet Boars.
The nicest pet the French forest affords is the marcessin, or baby wild boar. It is almost human in its cleverness, delights in funny pranks, has an evident sense of humor, makes friends of children and dogs and even lends itself to mimic hunts, playing the part of the hunted animal. Its antics are varied and original. The only creature to which the marcessin objects is its distant relative, the pig. Directly it sees that animal its back is up and its growing tusk is bared. In babyhood it has a lovely sleek coat of very dark brown and tan. When the silky hair is shed and bristles take its place the temper grows uneven. If marital and paternal cares come on, the wild boar puts away its childish ways and wants to take its family to the forest to feed
there on acorns and beech mast. Woe to the hound or to the keeper who wants to keep him back. In the forest this paterfamilias may be called the first line of defense, the sow the second,
and the little ones gambol round her.—
Paris Cor. London Truth.

A Limited Vocabulary.
If a person's knowledge of English were confined to one word, which would be the most useful? This subject was once discussed in the presence of Queen Caroline, her majesty entering into the question vigorously, according to the Dundee Advertiser. The greater number of the company fixed on "yes." One lady decided on "no," for, she argued, "though yes never means no, no very often means yes." How many men will indorse this? A young woman who had learned a few Irish words without understanding them lost herself in the mountains. Meeting a handsome young peasant, she tried her Irish on him. Pat looked astonished, then pleased, and, rubbing his sleeve across his mouth, said: "Arrah! Do ye mean it, miss?" The girl, in her ignorance, had asked him for a kiss.

A Gift of Solomon's.
In the ancient cathedral of Genoa a vase of immense value has been preserved for 600 years. It is cut from a single emerald. Its principal diameter is twelve and one-half inches and its height five and three-fourths inches. It is kept under several locks, the keys of which are in different hands, and it is rarely exhibited in public, then only by an order of the senate. When exhibited it is suspended round the neck of a priest by a cord, and no one is allowed to touch it but him. It is claimed that this vase is one of the gifts which were made to Solomon by the queen of Sheba.

Lope de Vega.
Lope de Vega, the famous Spanish dramatist and poet, lived from 1562 to 1635. His literary work began when he was about thirteen years old, and from that time until his death, a period of sixty years, he poured forth an enormous quantity of plays, dramatic compositions of all kinds, poems of every character, breathing every spirit from the strictest asceticism to the most unbridled license. Over 1,800 plays are credited to him, and the published collection, comprising about 200, is contained in twenty-eight volumes.

The French.
The French were first mentioned as the Franks, a tribe of warlike Germans in the northwestern part of the region now known as Prussia. They came into notice about 240 A. D., and with other German tribes invaded the Roman empire in the fifth century and settled in the country now known as France. The word Frank, or Frankman, means freeman. After their conquest of Gaul they named the country
Frankreich, or Frank's kingdom.

A Theatrical Superstition.
They were rehearsing a new play,
and every one was nervous, for the first night was close at hand. The play was a tragedy, yet at its end the dying heroine, as the curtain descended, said:
"Three beers, please."
Those words concluded the play. Yet they were entirely out of keeping. The concluding words should have been, "I die, but, since I have saved you, I die
happy," or something to that effect.
A dramatic critic new to the business
asked how it was that the tragedy ended with "Three beers, please," and the stage manager said:
"Superstition. It is always thought bad luck in rehearsals of new plays to speak the last sentence before the opening night. He who has the last sentence to speak substitutes some meaningless phrase for it. If he dared to speak the true phrase the prospects of the play would be thought doomed.
Some playwrights won't even write the last line of a play. They whisper it to the assembled company on its first reading, and from that day till the actual production the line is never again heard."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

The Geese Won.
An English gentleman once laid a wager with George IV. that geese would beat turkeys in a race. The king, thinking that such a wager was already as good as won, willingly made the bet, and the gentleman was left to choose time and place and distance. Being well acquainted with the habits of the birds he accordingly chose for the time the evening, just before sunset, and for the place the road outside the city walls and a mile for the distance. The time came, and each appeared with his flock of birds and the race began. Long ere the end came the sunset and immediately, true to their instincts, as soon as the sun had quite disappeared all the turkeys flew up into the nearest tree to roost, and no persuasion could induce them to budge an inch farther, and the geese, which had been slowly toddling on behind, quietly cackled in—the winners.

Moving the Well.
A New England woman once had in her employ a rosy cheeked Irish maid of all work, whose blunders afforded them amusement to compensate for any trouble she might entail. One day the owner of the place stated in the girl's hearing that he intended to have a wood house built on a piece of ground which at that time inclosed a well.

"Shure, sor," said the inquiring Margaret, "will you be movin' the well to a more convenient spot whin the wood house is builded?"
As a smile crossed the face of her employer Margaret at once perceived she had made a mistake of some sort.

"It's a fool I am, shure," she added hastily, bound to retrieve herself. "Of coorse whin the well was moved livery drop of wather would run out of it!"
Helping His Finish.
"You'll find I'm hard to discourage,"
said the persistent suitor melodramati-cally. "Some day I'll make you admit you love me, and then—and not till then—I will die happy."
"I'll say it now," replied the heartless girl, "I don't mind telling a lie for a good end."—Philadelphia Ledger.

from cough or night sweat? Free ex-

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Turner, who recently resided five miles from Paris on the Clintonville pike, moved to this city to be with Mrs. Turner's mother, Mrs. Jean Harmon, on Walker avenue. Friday morning Mrs. Turner drove out to the old home place and left her little four-year-old daughter, May Jean Turner, with her grandmother. The little girl disappeared shortly after the departure of her mother and could not be found. The police were notified and the search for the child lasted for several hours, and Mrs. Harmon was almost distracted over the disappearance of the little one. Finally a telephone message from a Mr. Munson, who resides on the Clintonville pike, told of the finding of the child, who was safely restored to her grandmother. The child was following her mother to the farm and had walked alone for two miles, and was on the right road when found.
